Scope and Content: The Blair Rixon Collection consists of personal papers, photo albums, newspaper clippings, plaques and ephemera of William Blair Rixon. Born in San Francisco in 1908, Rixon was a deputy district attorney for Contra Costa County in the 1940s, and then became a municipal court judge in Brentwood and Pittsburg in eastern Contra Costa County. He retired in 1974 and died in 1998. He was a long-time supporter of the Contra Costa County Historical Society. Among Rixon's letters in Box #6 is correspondence from the 1950s between Rixon and his high-school classmate Morey Amsterdam, who later gained fame for his role on the Dick Van Dyke television show. Box #6 also contains a folder on famed Hearst Castle architect Julia Morgan, who designed the Rixon family home in San Mateo which was built in 1913. The collection also includes Rixon's father's diploma from the San Francisco Commercial School in 1892 (the Commercial School later became Commerce High School).
